

Gaullaudet, Cable Cars, and Disability Pride:
The New Activism Among Disabled Americans

A lecture by Paul Longmore, Ph.D

- The emergence of a minority group perspective and civil rights movement among Americans with disabilities.
- The historic struggle of disabled people for self-determination.
- The current effort to fashion a positive social identity as expressed in such concepts as "disability pride" and "deaf culture."

noon-1:40
Wednesday, April 27
Cluster School 68
Sonoma State University

Paul Longmore has written extensively on the history of disabled people and on contemporary issues affecting citizens with disabilities, euthanasia, and the social significance of the Elizabeth Bouvia case. He has a physical disability as the result of polio.

Sponsored by the Office for Students with Disabilities