International Studies Programs

Students who wish to pursue a course of study with a strong international emphasis can choose among campus-based major programs in foreign-area studies, minors in international studies and Teaching English as a Second Language (TESL), and modern language courses designed to meet specific academic and career objectives. Study abroad opportunities can be integrated into all of these curricular options.

Minor in International Studies

The minor in international studies is an interdisciplinary program recommended for students preparing for professional, managerial, and service careers in international affairs, business, or education, and complements majors in the social sciences, humanities, and natural sciences.
Recognizing the increasing interdependence of the world, the minor is designed to increase the awareness and understanding of other cultures as well as develop a broader perspective on global issues and international relations. It provides an opportunity to explore and compare the social structures, cultures, political institutions and economic systems of other countries, as well as to study relations between them.

The minor consists of 20 semester units, which include at least one course from two different categories in Group A and at least one course from two different categories in Group B. Courses used for general education may not be counted toward the minor, and not more than 8 units from the student's major may be used toward the minor.

Modern Language Studies

For students seriously interested in imparting an international emphasis to their baccalaureate work, the study of at least one modern language is essential. Without the broadened cultural-linguistic flexibility and heightened self-understanding that result from learning a modern language, one can see the world only through the filter of one's own language and culture. The way to move beyond one's own innate nationalism to a truly international perspective is to learn the language, and therewith the habits and thought patterns of another people.

The University offers modern language programs in French, German, and Spanish. The major programs (French and Spanish) offer various interdisciplinary study options, allowing students maximum flexibility in choosing a program that fits their specific needs. Please see Modern Languages and Literatures section in this catalog for a detailed description of each program.

The paramount intent in all of these courses and programs is to move students smoothly and rapidly toward genuine fluency in speaking, writing, and understanding the modern language. The large number of Sonoma State University students who go on to apply their language skills to work or study abroad testifies to the program's success in this endeavor.
