Areas of Specialization

- Historical archaeology, urban archaeology, archaeology and ethnicity, local history research methods, cultural resources management.

Background

My archaeological career began in 1972 when I began working full-time on Roman and medieval sites on the British archaeological "circuit." Later, I worked on prehistoric and 18th-/19th-century archaeology in Virginia, the Great Basin, and California. Since the late 1970s, I have specialized in historical archaeology, especially in urban contexts, where I have acted as Principal Investigator for numerous archaeological research projects. Among these was the 1993-2004 Cypress/West Oakland project, possibly the largest piece of urban historical archaeology ever undertaken in the American West. My interest in ethnicity includes social boundary maintenance as viewed through the archaeology and history of the Overseas Chinese as well as cultural change among European immigrant groups. I have also written on the archaeology of African Americans and Jews in the American West. In addition to teaching archaeology and cultural resources management at Sonoma State University, I serve as Director of the Anthropological Studies Center, a University research-institute with a permanent staff of 20.

Professional Activities

I have made numerous presentations at professional meetings and to lay groups; taught archaeology to Native American tribes; designed archaeology-oriented museum exhibits; authored many technical studies; published over 50 monographs, reviews, and articles; written and illustrated two archaeology textbooks Death by Theory and Dug to Death (AltaMira Press, 2000 and 2003) that are used in undergraduate courses at dozens of universities; I'm a regular pre-publication reviewer for Historical Archaeology and serve on the Editorial Board of the International Journal of Historical Archaeology; I've been Thesis Committee Chair of over 40 completed MA theses at SSU and external examiner of MA and PhD theses for universities in South Africa, Canada, and Australia. I am currently task force liaison and principal author of a policy document on Standards and Guidelines in Archaeology for the State Office of Historic Preservation. In 2003, I was awarded the T.F. King Award in Cultural Resources Management by the Society for California Archaeology.
