

Statement from CSU Police Chiefs Regarding Recent Hate Crimes

The California State University Chiefs of Police remain committed to protecting our campus communities and fostering a safe environment for teaching, learning, and working. We are aware of the recent increases in race-based hate crimes against members of Asian and Pacific Islanders communities. We are also aware of online attacks and other racist conduct targeting Black History Month events across the nation. We categorically condemn race-based attacks and acknowledge the harmful impact of hate crimes on members of our CSU community. We know and understand that these events can produce feelings of fear, isolation, and anger. As such, we pledge our commitment to stand together and strengthen our collective efforts to end hate violence.

The police departments of the CSU continue to work diligently every day to serve and support our communities. We take all reports of criminal acts seriously, and we will thoroughly investigate all reports of hate crimes. Furthermore, we are committed to working with our campus partners to provide support and resources to anyone within our campus communities who is a victim of a hate incident.

If you have any information about crimes occurring on any of our campuses, please report them to your University Police Department.
